Assessing Highwoods Risk

Overall, Highwood operates its business within Canada where there is a low risk of forced labour and child labour. Highwood's workforce is largely comprised of office workers and highly skilled oil and gas field workers, and we believe there is a low risk of forced labour or child labour within our operations.

While Highwood operates in an area of low risk, we acknowledge that certain groups are particularly vulnerable to forced labour and child labour, including, but not limited to:

- Migrant workers
- Contract or temporary workers
- Ethnic and religious minorities; and
- Young or student workers

Highwood continuously seeks to identify any risk areas within our business and supply chain, and if any are found, mitigate the risk and address the issue.

We recognize our responsibility to ensure that forced labour and child labour are not used at any step of the production of goods, whether in Canada or elsewhere, by Highwood or within our supply chain. Below outlines just some of the actions Highwood has taken to address and mitigate these risks:

- Mapping our exploration and production activities (primarily in central Alberta).
 - Monitoring our Suppliers and working with Suppliers with strong ethical reputations.

- Developing and implementing due diligence policies and procedures to identify and address any use of forced labour and/or child labour in the organization's activities and supply chains; and
- Encourage staff and Suppliers to report any concerns or suspicions of forced labour or child labour.

Remediation Measures

The risk of forced labour and child labour is low in Canada and no instances were found in Highwood's business activities in 2025. As a result, Highwood has not taken any measures to remediate any forced labour or child labour. In addition, Highwood has not identified any loss of income to vulnerable families resulting from measures taken to eliminate the use of forced labour or child labour.

Training and Awareness

Highwood is committed to improving the training and awareness of our Staff to understand, identify and manage the risks of forced labour and child labour in our operations and across our supply chains. Staff at all levels are required to adhere to Highwood's Code of Business Conduct and Ethics policies and ensure it is understood and properly applied to their daily activities. Every new staff member of Highwood must review and sign that they have read, understand and will abide by the Code of Business Conduct and Ethics. All staff are also informed of how to report wrongdoing under the Whistleblower policy and are encouraged to take initiative in reporting any concerns or suspicions of wrongdoing. We also commit to providing our staff with ongoing training opportunities to ensure our staff have the sufficient knowledge.

Assessing our Effectiveness

Based on our review of our existing policies, practices, business activities, and areas we operate in, we believe the risk of forced labour or child labour in our operations or supply chain is low. We monitor compliance with our corporate policies on an ongoing basis. While we have not had any significant concerns or complaints identified to date, we commit to reviewing and addressing any concerns or complaints that are potentially identified.
